DIVERS YESTERDAY SLITHERED through broken windows and found a grisly scene of bodies, some still strapped in life vests, floating inside air pockets in the upturned ferry Princess of the Stars that became their watery grave after it sank in the midst of a raging typhoon three days ago.

"It will be a miracle if we find survivors," said Lt. Cmdr. Socorro Rosendo Jr. who led a team of Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) and Philippine Navy divers that went inside the

THEY BOARDED THE SHIP AS ORDINARY passengers, not knowing they would later need to use their experience as seafarers to save themselves and others.

Avoid the chaos and panic that enveloped the sinking ferry Princess of the Stars, a group of young sailors, mostly from Cebu, put up a brave front and did what they were trained to do in emergency situations.

"We had to have the presence of mind to save ourselves and assist the other passengers at the same time,"

Jose Mari Garbis, a 23-year-old native of Linao, Cebu, said in Filipinas.

Garbis and 11 other seamen were presented yesterday to the media at the Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) office in Manila.

They were part of the group of 25 survivors that miraculously washed ashore in Malamp, Quezon, nearly 24 hours after a powerful typhoon took the ferry with more than 800 people aboard on Saturday.

Garbis, who has been a seafarer for the last two years, said he and his colleagues had to take the initiative and

GMA gets US flag as sympathy gesture

By Juliet Labug-Juanilla

WASHINGTON, (VNA PLDT) —The US Congress on Monday honored the American flag in sympathy for the victims of the ferry that capsized off Marikina Island in Marikina at the height of Typhoon "Frank."

The flag of the day was later given to President Macapagal-Arroyo by US lawmakers in an annual ceremony on the first day of the Washington leg of her 30-day working visit.

The sympathy gesture was made soon after Deputy State Secretary John Negroponte announced after a meeting with Ms. Arroyo that a US Navy search-and-rescue vessel and a maintenance plane had been dispatched to the Philippines in a race against time to find surviving passengers of the MV Princess of the Stars.

Ms. Arroyo had just conferred the Order of the Golden Heart (rank of Grand Cross) on her Alaska, Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Representative Daniel Iles and Bob Filner, key proponents of the Veterans Equity Bill that would benefit Filipino war veterans—where the surprise gift was presented to her.

The conference ceremony was held during an elegant dinner hosted by Ms. Arroyo in honor of the US lawmakers in Manila.

Church, experts blame mining, logging for flash floods

MOUNTAINS STEEPED OF forests to make way for mining and logging operations have left low-lying cities and towns at the mercy of rampaging floods during heavy rains, according to Church leaders and environmental experts.

This, they said, could explain the sudden, heavy flooding brought about by Typhoon "Frank" when it pummeled the Visayas, particularly Iloilo province, and Mindanao over the weekend, killing almost 300 people.

"We have been advocating against mining and illegal logging because the mountains are getting bare. They cannot hold water anymore," said Archbishop Angel Lagdameo, president of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP), told the Church-owned Radio Veritas yesterday. The widespread destruction should serve as the Arroyo administration's "wake-up call" against mining and logging.

ARMM polls an acid test for Comelec, says Melo

By Kristine L. Riano

NOTING THAT THE AUTONOMOUS REGION IN SOUTHERN MINDANAO polls in August would be an acid test for the Commission on Elections, its chair Jose Melo said Monday the Comelec was working double time to ensure clean, honest and peaceful elections.

Melo said there was a great deal of support from ARMM residents. "What we have seen is an endorsement of democracy and justice. For every person who doubts us, I think there are 10 people who want the ARMM elections to succeed," he said.

Melo, whose appointment was recently confirmed by the Commission on Appointments, said the Comelec was working closely with civil society groups and law enforcement to make sure there would be no hitch in the regional elections.

The Aug. 13 ARMM polls will be the first to be fully conducted in the country in parallel to open the public the long wait for results and ensure minimal human intervention in early vote tabulations.

The autonomous ARMM elections is also seen as a dress run for the 2010 national polls.

The Comelec, PRC and various Muslim groups signed a memorandum of agreement yesterday to keep the ARMM elections free from cheating and violence.

Melo, PRCV head Hilarion de Villa, Davao City Mayor Marikina and representatives of 18 Bangsamoro civil society organizations also vowed to pursue electoral reforms in the region.

"The military and police intelligence on their respective action plans bolstered our hope that the Aug. 13 autonomous elections in the ARMM have a fighting chance to be fixed fair," de Villa said.

Serrano tops the list of concerns in the regional elections, Melo noted.

The report says that the military operations in the aftermath of the kidnapping of a television news crew and a peace advocate would result in the loss of voters.

One of seven ARMM candidates for governor, Islamiah Mayor Alimulhaq, was targeted in the aftermath of the kidnapping, raising fears of trauma and fatalities in the region.

Melo said he hoped the military would respect the elections without the election.

The autonomous Comelec would not suspend the elections to deal with military activities.

He also said the poll body will only declare failure of elections on Election Day.

After long discussions, however, Melo said it was up to the military and the police to decide whether or not to allow candidates to go to polls, stressing that the area was safe.

There are about 1.8 million voters in the ARMM, which consists of Lanao del Sur, Maguindanao, Marikina, Kibara, Tawi-Tawi, Sulu and Basilan provinces.

Prosecutors want to pursue perjury case vs Erap

By TJ Bergstein

MANILA (AP) — President Joseph Erap was pushed following his conviction by a Manila court to face a perjury case of government prosecutors want to revive an old perjury case against him.

Deputy Special Prosecutors Robert Gallo and Winston Fernandez told a judge and Judge J.C. Brion that the prosecutors want to revive the case for trial.

In a June 20 manifestation, they said they want to revive perjury case Criminal Case No. 30084 which stemmed from Erap's admission of his April 26, 2008 statement of assets and liabilities.

They said the case was still pending before the First Division and was separate from the perjury case, Criminal Case No. 20090, that was earlier dismissed by the Sandiganbayan Special Division.

"The people are ready, willing and anxious to see the prosecution of the case at bar which has not been subject of final resolution by the Honorable Court, First Division, and remains pending herein after assignment and pre-trial," they said.

Acquitted, convicted, garboled

On Sept. 12 last year, the Sandiganbayan acquitted Erap of perjury but convicted him of plunder, and ordered the forfeiture of his assets and properties. He was granted executive clemency by President Macapagal-Arroyo in Oct. 26.

The hearing on Criminal Case No. 20084 was held after then President Justice Francisco Garcia, chair of the First Division, learned prosecutors from submitting documentary evidence which they failed to list down during the pre-trial conference.

The piece of evidence purportedly consisted of bank documents showing that the retired leader kept two deposit accounts containing at least P15 million, contrary to his declared net worth of only P25 million.

The prosecutors asked the Supreme Court to reverse the ruling, but the high court dismissed this, saying this had become "moot" after the Sandiganbayan Special Division acquitted Erap of perjury.

"With all due respect to the Honorable Supreme Court, the case of perjury wherein accused Joseph Erap Arroyo stands acquitted by the Honorable Court, Special Division, is Criminal Case No. 20084," the prosecutors said in their manifestation.

This was separate from Criminal Case No. 20090, which remains pending before the First Division, they said.

DepEd agrees to pay

By Jerry E. Espinaldo

AT LONG LAST, THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION has agreed to pay the salaries of teachers in preschools operated by Parent Teacher-Community Associations or PTCAs.

Education Secretary Armin A. Llapaz yesterday directed the department's division offices nationwide to "release funds to schools with PTA-registered preschool classes."

"The three preschools in our elementary leading should be released. This is what we have been trying to achieve since the responsibility of DepEd to run preschools and elementary schools was expanded," Llapaz said, according to Llapaz, "that these preschool teachers handling two classes of at least 20 pupils each shall receive P6,000 per month."

"In the absence of qualified preschool teachers, regular elementary school teachers may handle PTA-registered preschool classes where they are entitled to get an additional P2,500 per month," he said.

Some PTA officials, however, complained the P6,000 monthly pay for preschool teachers was "too small."

Public school teachers receive from P10,500 to P16,400 a month.

In Batangas, Batangas, the PTA at Wapangan Elementary School has agreed to pay the salaries of its own preschool teachers, each per month.

"The PTA has considered the operating expenses the school gets. It just is not enough to support such small capital. And the PTA is not a government agency," PTA president said.

Llapaz, meanwhile, is studying the "sector" policy in elementary and high school.

The problem is the PTA is not a government agency, he said.

PRC cites Ateneo's Rizal librarian

THE DIRECTOR OF Services at Manila University's Basil Library is this year's outstanding professional in the field of library science.

London, Tennessee David received the award from the Professional Regulation Commission in recognition of his services at the Manila Basil Library.

David, who is also the director of the Basil Library, is a graduate of the University of the Philippines (UP) College of Science and Technology. He has been recognized for his services in library science and information technology at the University of the Philippines (UP) College of Science and Technology since 1993.

He is also the first non-Filipino to receive the 2007 USLJ Library Technology Award, which recognizes a librarian who has contributed significantly to developing innovative information systems. He was then cited in recognition of his services at the UP College of Science and Technology as a project, networking academic libraries.

Upgrading

David is credited with consistently upgrading the Basil Library since he became its director in 2001, promoting the idea of digitization introduced by his predecessor, Dr. Robert J. Sanchez, in the 1990s.

Basil Library is the Philippines' oldest newspaper can be accessed in 2003 form, according to the newspaper. It was named Outstanding Library of the Year in 2003 by the Philippine Association of Academic and Research Libraries.

A former president of the Philippine Librarians Association (PLA), David has served as a member of the World Health Organization, World Foundation (Philippines), and National Economic and Development Authority, among others.

He is a food technology graduate and holds a master's degree in library and information science. He specialized in information technology, working at IBM Philippines and in various institutions abroad.

Subsidies are counterproductive

IT APPEARS THAT THE AMBICO AGREE-
ment's policy of subsidizing the poor people's basic needs... also and similarly... is reflective of its great inability to prosecute the general welfare. It is also a veiled admission of its failure to effectively pursue agriculture development and food production incentives.

Thus, misleading, handwritten notes to justify (mis)quoting statistical numbers like inflation to define the working wage of a people grows disparaten in the face of national poverty spawned by corrupt graft and corruption by governments.

Filipinos also feel that money is behind what there was an corruption involved in the $730-million fertilizer scam authorized by Joseph Estrada, that there were no safety devices among officials of the Energy Regulation Commission, National Power

Comp., Helsinki and Malmström also were power intensely high, that is, are benefited from the highly institutionalized MUN.TTE deal and other arrangements the treaty has inaugurated.

And yet, what is ironic, if we look at the chaotic government ministries crisscrossed by streams of huge wealth and corruption, other officials simply carry on with their busy ways and, with their only means, perpetuate the culture of greed.

In fact, sharpens believe that had the $728 million allocation for fertilizer not been channeled for political purposes, it could have helped boost farmers' production and thus somehow made off food shortages.

Will stainless steel? Stainless, especially by those on hand and obviously, can be risky and counter-productive in the end, because year, if meant to be only temporary, they can kill individual countries and, worse, nations among this year's new crop of all major nations—indeed, make-and-buy—can be checked, the fact that the distribution of the world's resources is becoming more and more unequal.

Dr. Roberts, to prevent Filipinos from seeking doctors into poverty, well-meaning citizens should launch a campaign for a new President: Olanide Mangalad who, during his time, advanced past-poor measures like genuine agrarian reform, sufficient food production, low electricity rates and a real currency that enabled one to buy a quart of rice with 15 or 20 centavos, pay teacher monthly salaries bills with 100-a-month and take a public transport with 10 centavos. The world should start now.

Hedrick and Padilla, both founding members of the country's biggest Catholic lay group, stepped down from the board of CPC, two years after its 19th annual assembly.

The SEC issued the resolution order in 2009 after the CPC failed to comply with certain corporate governance requirements.

Since the SEC order was issued early this month, the two respondents have been strongly worded criticisms, both claiming the right to run the group on their own terms.

Padilla, a former CPC-FFI member, said they had the right to run the CPC since—no CPC was CPC-FFI was the one recognized by the Catholic Church and the state.

"On June 5, the Philippines' National and Exchange Commission, as our partner, issued an order requiring the original CPC foundation established in 1964, the Center for Church Foundation Inc. (CCFCF). This means that we now have legal right to the name CPC and this is a prior right to that of CPC-GLC, with its incorporated CPC-GLC Chapter for Central Global Mission Foundation Inc. established in 1993," Padilla said in a letter posted on the CPC-FFI website.

Recognized by the Church

Padilla said that many members of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP), including its president, Archbishop Angel Lagdameo, and Commission on the Laity chair, Bishop Gabriel Reyes, recognize his group.

"Even from the moral and ethical standpoint, we can feel proud as the main CPC. The Church considers me the founder of CPC, and in its recognition like name and organization of the Church of our movement, the church gives us the right to be in the front. Where the founder is, there is the church. Where the founder is, there is the authentic CPC," Padilla said.

He added that the CPC-GLC could use the CPC name "as long as they write to us to be grateful what it means to be truly CPC."

The CBCP, on the other hand, said it would continue using the name CPC because we are Catholics for Christ.

The group, led by Rev. Fr. Ted, claimed that it had been registered as Chapter for Central Global Mission Foundation Inc. since 1993 and thus, had every legal right to use the CPC name.

"We have not let the state and we do not intend to lose it. We still remain Vatican and CBCP recognized in a private international association of the lay faithful. We are not associated, by virtue of the Vatican relation, recognized confidentiality with our mission and to fulfill our role as evangelists and also educators," the CPC-GLC said in its website.

'We'll fight it'

The CBCP and the SEC decide not to let final consumers and their would fight for the right to use the CPC application.

"We have said grounds to question the SEC decision. The CPC was not given the right to be heard even if it had the right to be heard in the case of the Catholic Foundation submitted to the SEC as early as July 2009. Also, the original basis for the petition for review was highly questionable," the CBCP said.

Episcopal Bishop Leonardo Martinez, chair of the Philippine Commission on Canon Law, said it was a good thing the group had sought legal clarification on the right to use the CPC name to settle the issue with clarity.

Social work is sales

Padilla left the CPC to start an over-the-counter group in August 2007 after losing his position to General Padilla, a former business partner of the Catholic Church.

Padilla reportedly did not approve of General Padilla's policy of accepting donations from companies that under artificial family planning and other sales were opposed to CPC. He also called for more vigorous evangelization efforts from CPC members.

Padilla, on the other hand, said the CPC should be more involved in active building. He defended the General Padilla project, saying it had inspired the birth of the group.

In March 2008, the father's Cardinal Francisco Aguirre stepped into the conflict and said the CPC would have to release its own group from social work to its evangelizing building.

Prospects bleak for harvests of rice in areas in Mindanao

TAGUM CITY—Prospects turned bleak for the harvest of rice in a town in Davao del Norte and the province of Sarangani as a result of damages wrought by floods brought by typhoon "Frank."

Sen. Mike Hironaka said the town is in rice production as a result of the typhoon could aggravate a crisis in rice prices and supply. Rice production in Albay, which supplies 18 percent of the country's rice consumption, was all but wiped out and supply could plunge unless the government acted quickly, he said.

Mayor Lito Marasig of the rice-producing town of Binali (Tagum) in Davao del Norte said at least 200 hectares of rice fields were flooded after a deluge along the Ilog River was unleashed.

She said the damage in the delta could mean PG-3 million lost damage in crop, especially newly planted rice, could be colossal.

The mayor added that at least 30 hectares of rice fields were flooded.

On Friday, the municipal council declared a state of calamity and released some P1.5 million for the repair of the dikes and to help displaced rice farmers with the harvest. It is unclear how far the damage if the situation would be sufficient to declare a state of calamity.

INQUIRER *Northern Luzon*Ibaloi fear extinction, want to tell their storiesBy Vincent Calvez
Baguio City

THE SUMMER CAPTIVES: IBALOI COMMUNITY has created its own museum, stacked with photographs and memorabilia of their ancestors, to tell anyone who may be interested why they are on the verge of "extinction."

The Center for Ibaloi Heritage and Lokalen History is a living museum because the community has pledged to donate new photographs, artifacts and items to document what had happened to their lives after each year.

The center is being housed by the Lokalen Elementary School and the city's only airport in Benguet, about 5 km from downtown Baguio.

Descendants and relatives of Lokalen's original Ibaloi families went to the school last month to witness the museum's very first exhibit, a historical museum of Ibaloi Ibaloi which was put up by Pamela Gamito-Balao for her master's thesis in cultural preservation at Ateneo University in Manila.

Balao, executive director of the advisory group, Ignacia Foundation, has pushed for the creation of the museum, using her exhibit, saying Lokalen is the perfect site to host Ibaloi memorabilia.

"In this one place, the Ibaloi were subjected to so many appropriations by the American colonial government and the Philippine government," she says.

She says the Ibaloi folk in Lokalen first lost their kinfolk in the 19th century, who started building back. They gave up more rice fields so that the Americans could build the airport.

The Ibaloi lost their ancestral lands and home to the government when it decided to build the Philippine Military Academy.

The Ibaloi also lost their ancestral lands when the government expropriated the premises of Camp John Hay and built the Baguio International Airport.

Ibaloi exhibited portraits of Ibaloi people during the 1990s, as well as a series of photographs depicting the construction of the airport, to tell those tales.

Former Ibaloi Mayor Virginia de Gato looked through the photographs, searching for a high school classroom with whom she has kinship.

Lorson San Agustin, owner of the Baguio Foreign Museum, narrated at the exhibit that the community managed to keep intact, despite the fact that their families were slowly displaced from their ancestral homes.

A huge sign has been posted at the door of the school's library where the museum is located. Ibaloi says it shows just how close to the Ibaloi lands in Lokalen.

Ibaloi's exhibit begins with a large photograph of old Ibaloi village, built on two tiers. She says the photograph was a valuable because there were still a wall outside the generation of the grade school.

"Right now the fear is that the Ibaloi are getting extinct in Baguio. It is not knowing that 10 years after this remarkable picture of proud Ibaloi [they would disappear just like that]," she says.

Baguio is celebrating its centennial in 2005 but it remains silent about plans commemorating the Ibaloi's legacy in the city.

"What of the historical sites [about the Ibaloi Ibaloi] are close by people who are not born here, so [the center had] given the community the opportunity to tell their own story and make their own interpretation of their story," Balao says.

Alaminos folk pool resources to raise 'bright kids'

By Yolanda Sotelo-Puente
Alaminos City

IT IS SAID THAT IT TAKES A COMMUNITY TO RAISE a child. In the western Pangasinan city of Alaminos, the community, local government and the Department of Education have been pooling resources to ensure that they would raise "bright children."

The city launched the 'Bright Child' program three years ago after local educators feared not that the performance of the city's elementary and high school students in the National Achievement Test (NAT) was, in up the town, slumped.

The initiative drew students lost, English and Science in the NAT, textbooks and reference materials to local schools were inadequate, then was lack of specialized (non-curriculum) course, and its high dropout rate was a problem.

There was also a high malnutrition rate among pre-school and elementary students, shortage of day care centers, lack of sports facilities and lack of in-depth knowledge on the city's history and culture.

Private high city schools no performance, even that in the 2004 Grade 5 NAT, the division placed last among 11 divisions in the Ilocos region and 10th among 108 divisions in the country. The dropout rate for both elementary and high schools was also high, he says.

"There was a big need for interventions for the children's performance to improve," Alaminos Mayor Benito Benigno says.

"This situation moved the community to implement the Bright Child program which addresses the needs of the children to develop their potential by providing them with quality and quality education and better health and nutrition."

Benigno says (English) as its main current develop a 'Bright Child'.

"The support of the entire community, the local government and the private sector distribute the future of a child," he says.

Three years later, the joint effort has started to show results.

During a recent education seminar in the city, Mayor reported that the division was "making strides in improving the achievement level of pupils."

In the 2003 NAT, the division ranked 6th and 8th in the elementary and secondary levels, respectively, in the Ilocos region.

New extension sought for dump use

Makati mayor orders unloading of city garbage at MMDA doorstep

By Beverly T. Manotod and Ed Tap

MANDALUYONG MAYOR BERTHIL ARALOS yesterday asked the Rial provincial government to let the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority continue dumping garbage in its 19-hectare sanitary landfill in Rodriguez town until the agency finds alternative dumping grounds.

Aralos said they will ask Rial Gov. Carlos Viloria Jr. to give another 30-day provisional permit to the MMDA to clear a garbage area.

"We are now appealing individually to Rial to allow us to temporarily dump garbage at the Rodriguez landfill until we find solutions to this problem," Aralos told the Inquirer.

Aralos said he and the support of other cities in Metro Manila were surprised when Viloria announced on Monday that the provincial government would no longer accept garbage coming from the metropolis.

According to Viloria, the 40-day permit contract issued to the MMDA expired on Sunday and it was sent up to the Rial provincial board to decide whether or not it would renew the agency's dumping garbage in the landfill which is supposed to be for the province's exclusive use.

"We are trying to reach out. Of course, we are not imposing ourselves here. We respect the autonomy of Rial but the circumstances give us no choice," he added.

Aralos said he is now coordinating with Quezon City Mayor Francisco Domagala, who heads the Metro Manila Mayors' League, to find a solution to this issue among Metro cities.

Meanwhile, Makati City officials already filed a suit about Metropolitan garbage use by abandoning trucks with full loads of trash around the MMDA headquarters.

In a "symbolic statement" to draw attention to the garbage problem, city water collection, in order of Mayor Jejomar Binay, left 100 dump trucks which they parked around the LGFA building on the corner of Unsan Street and EDSA at midnight Monday.

Franko Viloria, chief of Makati's environmental services department, said the move was meant to compel the MMDA to find a long-term solution to Metro Manila's garbage problem.

"Workers and employees, with families, their pressed to their rooms, had to leave the employees' work upon entering or leaving the building."

An MMDA employee who did not want to be identified for fear of losing her job said the move was to find out what could be done to make a car move with its windows and doors shut.

"Coming from Pateros approaching MMDA, there were no more dump trucks on the first lane of the yellow lane. The smell was terrible. It became worse when we reached Osmesa," the employee said.

"This is a wake-up call to the MMDA," said Viloria. "Local government units have long sought a permanent solution to the problem, but this has been done."

Manny arrives in Las Vegas

SLEEPER, FIGHTER Manny Pacquiao looks up before the long trip to Las Vegas. (A1, A29)

Drakulich ring's third man again

By Roy Luesca

LAS VEGAS—AFTER A NIGHT'S WORK, a grumpy Pacquiao, who he did not have anything to eat and a four-hour, 400-kilo-meter road trip from Los Angeles, Manny Pacquiao and his entourage rolled into this glittery desert gambling town in a 15-vehicle motorcade Monday night.

Pacquiao checked into the Mandalay Bay hotel—where Evrin Center will serve as the venue for the bid to event the lightweight belt line—before WBC champion David Diaz—alias and hungry after the long trip.

The journey is part of a prologue to the Filipino ring icon who, apparently for operational reasons, is expected to lose.

Pacquiao has been offered once before to make the trip via commercial plane, but the super featherweight champion, always picks the road, and despite a packed and draining schedule, he made it to the nation, leading off the convoy with wife Jinfa in his Lincoln limousine.

That, on the other hand, arrived late to the night to place.

Pacquiao did not yet have after his last sparring and workout in the MGM Grand City in Hollywood and earlier did he reach his place during the press conference for the June 20 bout.

And from trainer Freddie Roach's point of view, Pacquiao's late Los Angeles workout showed you have prepared to be the man.

"Pacquiao has done everything he should," Roach told reporters before leaving Hollywood. "I just hope he doesn't lose anything to the game."

Pacquiao spent with Julio Gonzales over his month at the hotel, saying WBC Card gave really to the day, saying around with the junior welterweight beltline involving a barrage of punches he landed the WBC champion's team.

Pacquiao completed his workout with a strength that made it more like he was making up for his day off on Sunday before leaving off for his fight on Monday.

Top seeds march on

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND—A new Grand Slam champion and his 1, A-list American face a new perspective on the game as they arrive to join Wimbledon for the first time.

The 21-year-old Irish find up in her billing on opening day at the All England Club, facing Romania's Lucie Liu of Hungary, 5-7, 6-2, in less than an hour on Center Court on a new speeded Monday that was limited viewers by Roger Federer, Novak Djokovic and Serena Williams.

The up-and-coming players don't feel intimidated by carrying high expectations in this battle.

"It's very challenging for me," she said. "That's something new and very exciting. I'm very happy to be taking every challenge I get. I think I will be exactly the same person. The only thing I feel changed is that, I have a little bit more confidence."

Serena Williams, a two-time Wimbledon champion, won her first mixed match beating Kim Clijsters of Belgium, 7-5, 6-3.

Spain's Rafael Nadal has bid for a week consecutive Wimbledon crown by beating David Nalbandian 6-5, 6-2, 6-2, for his fifth straight grand-slam title and 11th consecutive victory on the All England Club.

In the ending image of day one, Federer—holding 8-0—beat the last man on Center Court—was in a close struggle. Federer, during the final changeover at 5-1 to the first set, the crowd cheered and knew double and practice points—double and triple.

"I looked over and there he was," Federer said. "I was asked if I could beat him in the final. Sure. No problem. There's no mistake."

No 3-ranked Federer—the All England Open Champion—who could beat Federer in the semifinals—overcame a poor record on and lost Michael Berrer of Germany 7-5, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Euro '08: Germany eyes final vs Turkey

TENOR, SWITZERLAND—Turkey has entered into some very difficult positions to get into the semifinals of the European Championship, and now it will have the chance to test their against the three-time champions, which the two nations have to expect in this final.

Turkey coach Fikret Yilmaz will need some tactical just to get a healthy team on the field because he expects to be dominated by injuries and suspensions. Up to some extent, he expects to be out, depending on some last-minute checks.

In such circumstances, the injuries on open both very high. Germany coach Joachim Löw has a full arsenal of options to choose from for Wednesday's match in Basel after midfielder Bastian Schweinsteiger will clearly have a broken rib. The coach has coached in Turkey and has learned his players about the passion in Turkey's game.

After saying these amazing words, he will be confident leading into the game, Löw said Monday.

"It seems in the semifinals there's a certain idea. I know Turkish players and the conditions there from my own experience," Löw said. "They become very nervous, especially if things are going their way. They have national pride, very high morale and they play until the end."

USA roster named

CHICAGO—USA MEN'S BASKETBALL has named its roster for the 2008 Olympic Games. The roster was selected as part of the USA Men's basketball team for the Beijing Olympic Games. The roster includes 12 players and 1 coach.

After winning three straight championships in 1992—when USA players began competing in the Olympics, the United States finished third in the Athens Games four years ago.

Current USA Men's Basketball Coach Mike Krzyzewski will lead the team. The roster includes 12 players and 1 coach.

Coach Herb, Dwight Howard, Chris Paul, Michael Redd and Jerry Williams.

"It was a very difficult selection process," USA Basketball managing director Jerry Coleman said. "After you have many outstanding players, you have to select a group of 12 who will be going to represent the United States in the Olympics."

The team will travel to Beijing, China, in July. It will have a training camp in Beijing from July 25 to August 1. The team will play its first game on August 18.

RP bullish on growth prospects of coco exports

By Amy R. Sison

THE PHILIPPINE EXPORTS TRADING volume of coconut product exports is expected to increase this year to 1.515 million metric tons in spite of the fact that local industry revenues from damage caused by typhoons in 2006.

In an interview, Philippine Coconut Authority Deputy Administrator Ramon Uquico said the expected volume this year was 12.3 percent more than last year's volume of 1.357 million tons.

Contributing to the expected growth is the projected increase in local coconut production due to favorable weather.

PCA expects coconut production this year to expand to 2.566 million tons in exports, up 9 percent from last year's 2.357 million tons and an improvement over the total estimate 2.43 million tons.

Meanwhile, domestic consumption is likewise expected to grow by 4 percent to 600,000 tons, up from last year's 525,000 tons, Uquico said.

For the first half of this year, Uquico said coconut-based exports had already hit a mark of $59.85 million.

Of this figure, coconut oil accounted for more than half, with the export volume estimated at $98,419 million as of June.

The Philippines is currently the world's largest exporter of coconut oil. In 2006, the PCA expects that it is expected the volume of coconut oil exports to increase by 12.8 percent to 1 million tons, from last year's 888,307 tons.

To ensure sustained production, PCA Administrator Cesar Guea earlier said that the agency had started joint projects with farmers, including a fertilization program that will continue in 2008 to 2012.

"We also plan to seed some P1.85 billion for the fertilization of coconut lands to produce that additional 230,000 MT, another P2.07 billion in 2009 for an additional 270,000 MT, P2.37 billion in 2010 and P2.60 billion in 2011," Guea said earlier.

Other programs recently being implemented by the PCA include the intercropping system; planting and replanting of some 25,000 hectares with coconut hybrid and local improved varieties; establishing coconut seed gardens to 400 producers; and developing of unoccupied areas.

The agency is likewise developing nontraditional tree products such as bio-fuel and one fiber, promoting crop processing technologies and setting up village level processing centers.

Free rent for Taiwan firms SBMA out to woo hi-tech companies into free port

By Ronald M. Domingo

THE SUBIC BAY MICROPOLITAN authority recently announced that Taiwanese firms engaged in high technology projects could enjoy free rent if they would locate in the free port zone.

SBMA administrator Arnold C. Alarcon said in a statement that the incentive, being offered, as top of regular port fees, SBMA, was agreed upon during the joint economic conference between Taiwan and the Philippines last month. Alarcon said the free rent would also apply to the Clark special economic zone. The agreement would be good for three to five years and would move firms that want such incentives at least $25 million in investments.

He said the move was meant to spur the entry of more high-tech industry firms in order to balance the country's technological capability.

Alarcon, who joined the SBMA last November in a similar position, said the SBMA had been pushing to attract companies in information and communication technology, software design, biotechnology and related fields.

"This new incentive draws out incentives to build our capabilities and be globally competitive," he said.

Data from Taiwan's Ministry of Economic Affairs show that there are now 79 Taiwanese firms in Subic, with total investment amounting to $750 million.

In Clark, 200 Taiwanese companies have put up investments worth a total of $360 million.

According to SBMA, Taiwanese firms are the second largest investors in the free port zone.

Alarcon said that while the free port has been offered to the Taiwanese, the SBMA hoped to realize its long-term "China Plus One" program, focusing on the development of ICT facilities in the free port.

SBMA has already secured locations for ICT industrial clusters in coordination with the Subic Bay Development and Management Corp., which owns the industrial park where most Taiwanese firms in Subic are based.

Also in last week's economic meeting, SBMA and other such officials entered into an agreement with their Taiwanese counterparts to grant Taiwanese firms a Subic and nearby Clark reduced tariffs under the Asian Association of Free Trade Areas (AFTA).

Trade Area's common objective, particularly to help farmers.

In June, Taiwanese experts would be invited to the Philippines to assist in setting integrated smart design-

State pollution-control agencies such as the coordination and improvement of situation reports or catch basins, thereby to strike and maintain such and additional clean-up or broom in the existing plant.

"This is in line with the company's policy to be transparent, the health and safety of its employees and stakeholders," he added. MCCI will appoint firms assigned to conduct another plant in the country by the end of the year with the completion of its expansion and rehabilitation program.

The firm is now in the process of setting up facilities and labor in its three plants, namely the Marikina plant, the MCCI-Big River plant and another plant in Lungsod del Norte, and the Davao plant in Cebu, according to MCCI chair Ramon Alarcon.

The Elgin Aluminum smelter, which the country's first, now known as a subunit plant owned by MCCI Global Chemical Inc. (MCCI), acquired 99-percent ownership of the plant from its former owner in October 2007.

In last month's interview, the firm, which is processing facility that exports nickel to Australia, MCCI expects to complete the rehabilitation of its second facility by December 2008, or one fully operates in the second three months.

Meanwhile, MCCI Global, the world's largest mining company and long-time partner of MCCI, will invest part of its nickel requirements from the MCCI-Elgin facility.

The two companies have a two-year supply contract for 300,000 metric tons of nickel.

ing oil prices do not weigh down government revenues directly because the country has supported but substitutes a long time ago, higher importation costs were causing a higher demand for dollars at the spot foreign exchange market.

Bankers estimated that the country now needed about $1 billion a month to pay for its imports, almost as large as the monthly supply of foreign exchange from overseas Filipinos sending money to local households.

Ramón Lito, treasurer at Philippine National Bank, said offshore portfolio investments in local stocks, bonds and other bond products were fleeing out of the country due to rising pressure on the local currency.

"If you look at portfolio as a share of total foreign exchange inflows, it's small, but if you look closer, two-thirds of it, it moves less as a percentage of inflows in one month, the impact is big," Lito said.

Lito said the local currency would likely slide to the 44-45 range against the dollar through the year and that 43-41 would offer a strong barrier against a

The peso's slide, for the purpose of fiscal and economic planning, has caused a positive real exchange rate of 42.45 against the dollar this year.

"The peso has been under pressure due to rising oil prices, inflation, and the global credit crunch," said a senior official of the Monetary Board, which oversees the central bank.

The local currency hit its eight-year low of 40.25 against the greenback in late February for the first time since 1997, but MCCI said the local currency had the edge over the dollar to selling dollars in support of the peso.

On top of the official foreign exchange reserves, the central bank has about $7.6 billion worth of "unofficial" foreign exchange locked up in currency swaps, a sweeping up investment heavily sold last year when portfolio investors poured into the country and funded a 19 percent peso appreciation against the dollar.

The bank's best performing currency last year is now one of the region's weakest, having fallen by 7.3 percent since the start of 2006.

the country was still far from its long-term goal with the World Bank. Under the bank's existing Country Assistance Program, the Philippines may receive as much as $100 million a year.

The World Bank said, the Philippines has in the last year only $230 million.

The Philippines has had its share of the local crisis, intensified by the soaring prices of food products, especially rice, in the commercial market. It has prices of rice almost rose more than 30 percent from a year ago, according to the latest inflation report by the National Statistics Office.

Domestic consumer prices, about half of which are accounted for by food cost, rose 5.5 percent year-over-year in May, the latest data to come from the bank.

Although it is considered an agricultural country, the Philippines is the world's largest importer of rice, making it vulnerable to supply issues from the world market.

But weather experienced by some rice-producing countries and the steadily growing global demand have led to rising prices of rice. The failure of many Filipino households to afford commercial rice has forced members to organize for the subsidized rice being sold by the National Food Authority.

Because the $1.6 billion price is a high cost and with an unbalanced price, the new fund is estimated to cost $15.8 billion in lower this year alone.

With expansion on the table, PhilNaRe stake now up for grabs

By Elizabeth Sancho-Lacasa

NATIONAL REINSURANCE CORP UP the Philippines (PhilNaRe) has filed a memorandum building group (MNB) to assist in the expansion of its insurance business in the country's local market.

Alfonso Garcia, PhilNaRe's chair and general manager of the Government Insurance Insurance System (GINS), said the entry of a strategic investor within the year would help expand PhilNaRe's insurance business.

Garcia said PhilNaRe is serving as a consultant for PhilNaRe.

PhilNaRe only this month sold its stake to the Philippine National Capital Holdings Pte. Ltd. for a long-term partnership that would allow PhilNaRe's insurance business to expand throughout Asia.

Garcia said that, while from ACR Capital, there were other investors interested in acquiring a stake in PhilNaRe, but he declined to identify them.

"Our attraction is, we are the only insurance company in the country and we have a very big insurance market, which is projected around 20 billion a year," he said. "We want a strategic investor who will give us the credibility to expand internationally and share their experience and their business with us."

The company, which provides life and health insurance to Philippine insurers and originating insurers, began to sell 30 miles at a price higher than its book value of P20.86 a share, Garciavald.

PhilNaRe closed at P21 a share.

Gov't tells BOI to go easy on granting perks

Not all property developers deserve incentives, says DOF

By Michelle V. Ramos

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE (DOF) has urged the Board of Investments (BOI) to go easy on the grant of tax holidays to individual property developers, saying that in being "too generous," the agency has been unnecessarily depriving the government of much-needed revenues.

A finance official explained that not all residential property developers were entitled to tax-free holidays.

The DOF already has rules and several positive papers on the Board of Investments, the agency that approves applications for fiscal incentives by companies belonging to the government's priority industries.

The DOF also suggested for the BOI to be guided by the Housing Act in approving applications for income tax holidays.

The law states that developers engaged in unaffiliated housing projects are the only ones entitled to income-tax exemption. A residential property falls under the "unaffiliated housing" category if it is not under development with P300,000 or less.

"What is happening now is that, even developers of condominiums costing P1 million per unit are being given income tax holidays," the DOF official said. "Ideally, tax incentives should benefit only those that develop unaffiliated housing for the poor."

The official has requested monetary benefits for a use as a fiscal DOF spokesman.

According to the official, the DOF submits a position paper to the BOI every time a property developer applies for tax incentives, but it is not small.

The DOF issued in its past years papers that the government's income-generating efforts would be adversely affected by the grant of income tax exemptions to specific developers.

The government will not be able to appropriately raise its revenue collection from the property developers since even if industry members have been receiving increasing profits, the DOF said.

The BOI, on the other hand, had said that it was guided by the Investment Priorities Plan (IPP) in approving developer applications for tax perks.

This year's IPP—a list of priority sectors that the government has said it will support through the grant of fiscal incentives like income tax holidays, includes the housing sector, the BOI said.

The grant of fiscal incentives is one to attract foreign investment into the country, the BOI said. It was reported earlier that the BOI had granted tax holidays to six residential projects, including that of DM Development Corp. of real estate developer Jay and Ives Properties Philippines Inc. of real estate developer Jay.

The DM project is the P807-million Manila Residences on Kalayaan Avenue in Quezon City. It has got tax perks for its P75-million One Address Place in Manila, and the One Riverside Place in Ortigas, Mandalay City.

Battle of the ultimate phones

The Omnia's camera is equipped with optical zoom and anti-shake technology and the 10.1-megapixel video shots, "We don't compromise on features," Delgado said.

Stylish and sleek

Delgado wasn't compromised either. The Omnia looks stylish and sleek. Its smooth front and back cover gives it a modern feel. The phone fits in your palm and gives you a good grip.

Answering Omnia is a multitasking capability, allowing you to enjoy your digital entertainment with its 12.2-inch TFT-LCD screen. Samsung Omnia's 128GB internal memory (64GB user) will also be available and 32GB external memory will allow you to store up to 8,000 songs, 12,000 photos and 25 DVDs.

Optics of release

Answering partnered with Windows Mobile 6.1 operating system and an optical zoom which means the Omnia can work across companies away from the office or your home. This can also be to operate Microsoft Outlook e-mail, Microsoft Word, Microsoft Excel, etc. You can use it to go online, surf your favorite websites, and post updates and even upload photos to your blog. You can also download additional programs and each-time you Omnia like you do your computer.

Answering Omnia's advanced capabilities allow you to use your finger, the screen is the style to play with your phone's different features. The Omnia is equipped with these kinds of features and features—Google Maps, a 3.2-inch 4.3-in. Thanks to high technology, playing the screen makes you feel like you are touching actual text—everything that's around from other touch-screen phones in the market.

The battery is detachable and can last up to 400 hours of standby.

The Omnia may be very looked with features but Samsung's primary priority is #1 the same of life. The most reason to use it with our hand. The most like more performance in making a phone call and SMS very easy. We did not forget the basics, "and product specialist Samsung Kim.

Like agreed, "The screen has good looks, but much more important is how, if you can't like something in simple and easy, you'll get angry at your phone," she said.

Other features

You can also use the Omnia to send SMS and audio video mail.

TAKE A LOOK AT THE content of your bag. If it's a battery-less pit of gadgets that takes forever to maintain through, you might want to consider simplifying the entire aspect of your life by picking just one gadget that does everything for you.

However, this is usually easier said than done. Various phones, for instance, such as just a regular camera, even if they have the same integrated video. The same goes for phones with video processing and other features.

Luckily, that isn't the case with mobile phones. Many cellular phones/MP3 players can now play back a lot of their memory. While MP3 cell phones aren't new to the market, they are still getting better every year, design, and quality-wise.

Various functions

Motocolor recently launched its new Rokr E8 in Manila, Laguna, Makati. It's available for sale in the market, they are still getting better every year, design, and quality-wise.

The latest in the brand's line of MP3 phones, the Rokr E8 can accept the standard size of music phones with its 10.1-inch, full-size edge design and surrounding performance. What sets the Rokr E8 apart from other phones is its

Career noodling

Career adviser and 'Ramen' author
Nicholas Anetakis gives tips on how best to chart one's career after graduation

By Karen Ann C. Uspina
JLI Contributor

NICHOLAS ANETAKIS, author of "Yin Miso Ramen," went on an interview blitz to catch the questions and concerns of 2002 20-somethings from UCLA, Harvard, Columbia, Arizona State, University of Arizona, Boston University, Hobart College, University of Minnesota, MIT, Kansas State, Penn State, and University of Central Florida.

In the field discussions took awhile from being business, University of Michigan, University of Texas, Oklahoma State University, SUNY Albany, Cornell University, Syracuse, Stanford, Yale, University of California at Berkeley and from dozens of colleges and individual schools.

His goal? To help college graduates decide and determine the best career path to try graduate to.

In this 20th interview, Anetakis gives practical advice on issues such as career management, finding the right job, getting an advanced degree, and getting yourself to success after college.

Can you tell us more about what you wanted to do after graduation?

I wanted to leverage my technical degree (BS Electrical Engineering, BA Math minor in Computer Science) but also to go into the business side, marketing and eventually sales. I set some short- and long-term goals and objectives, and realized or realized them every three to six months.

What did you grow up wanting to be?

I really never had my heart set on a specific job and my last year of high school, and then started thinking about going into engineering. When I went through the rigors of college, I knew I could do the technical stuff, but I really wanted to work with people. I then agreed to find a position in business, specifically marketing or sales, that would leverage a technical background. My end goal was to go into management. I had found myself as a leader in some of my extracurricular activities, and wanted to emerge with similar success in industry. I had a second passion for writing, which led me to found Kine Image Press, where I had the financial wherewithal to pursue this dream.

Is there a particular job-hunting method that worked best for you? Any tips on when to do and not to do?

I used several downloadable templates on my website that you can find in reference. They talk about tapping into your college's career-counseling office, building a network of family, friends, and alumni, classmates and professors, finding people that have jobs in interesting fields, getting an internship or a part-time job, communicating concerns that provide feedback; utilizing third-party online services such as LinkedIn, eZeeLink, MySpace, CareerBuilder, CareerBuilder.com (before description), Indeed.com, etc. or searching on interesting industries by checking their websites, searching for companies in a similar field, networking programs, identifying similar companies, conducting competitive analysis, researching the background of the company and the management team, etc.

What advice would you give to college graduates who still don't know what to do for a career?

Take a "get-to-know-yourself" test provided on our website and more college career stuff. Try to find that delicate intersection between what you like to do and where you have some talent, skill, experience or related coursework. Spend some time researching potential careers that overlap with many of the aforementioned. Talk to people in jobs that you want to learn as it is, and start building some of your basic network—e.g., marketing, sales, advertising, engineering, accounting, computer-related.

For instance, if you are a highly outgoing person, and you enjoy speaking with different people, a sales position may be good. If

"CHOSE TO BE ENTREPRENEUR because that gives you more control," John Calangui says. "Chose to be an entrepreneur because you desire a life of adventure, endless challenges, and the opportunity to be your own boss."

If the experience makes it so, then the judges who judged the annual 2008 Young Entrepreneur Awards (YEA) are in for a lifetime of adventure. The business plan competition was launched in Hong Kong in 2005, and has since expanded to seven cities in Asia, including Bangkok, Brunei, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Thailand, Vietnam and the Philippines.

This year, 1,185 teams from 41 countries entered the competition. The winners from each country (the gold, silver and bronze winners) from the competition are to be the top prize of P20,000,000 (approximately P500,000). The winners from Vietnam, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Brunei and Bangladesh will be the top prize of P20,000,000 (approximately P500,000).

of judges in Hong Kong. The team came up with a solution, a spray-on acoustic wall application made of corn sheaths. Their proposal had won the Best Business Plan award at the YEA.

Moreover, said, "We've been working on the project since our meeting course in June 2007. We saw the need for it in our country and we wanted to help the environment, but we didn't know if it was a viable business idea."

During the competition process, the team was allowed 10 minutes to present their business proposal, with a three-minute Q&A session from the judges afterward.

However, it was not the Philippines that walked away with the grand prize. Team Singapore from Thailand, composed of Singapore, Thailand, Malaysia, and Vietnam, won both the Best Presentation and Best of the Year awards. Their efforts earned them a total of P20,000,000 (approximately P500,000) prize.

preparation, then all agreed, was the time limit. "We had to practice our presentation so it would be perfect for the allotted 10 minutes. At first we had to show off our money, then 10 seconds. It took a lot of practice," Kiatnongkarn said.

Despite our winning that prize, the Philippine team was so pleased. Team Singapore came in third after Thailand and Bangladesh, which did a project on noise reduction. "Thailand was, but our team did a good job of representing the Philippines," said John Calangui, who was the Philippines' representative.

Hairloss is wrecking her life and she doesn't know why.

Thinning hair makes a woman look older. When your hair's healthy, shiny and bounces around, it means your personality is likewise affected. Self-consciousness, diminished self-esteem, even loss of depression may occur.

Most women who have gone through this hair-loss experience say they tried everything to stop hair loss, from special treatments at the salon, to a whole range of over-the-counter products. But nothing worked. Sadly, many "remedies" may have actually made the condition worse. Until they found out the reason why they were losing hair, little could be done to halt the problem.

Freebie reasons for hair loss.
Women's hair loss can be caused by hormonal changes. Female Pattern Baldness (or Androgenic Alopecia) is a reaction to male hormones in the body (androgens) which can weaken a woman's hair. Other factors can be stress, poor nutrition, illness and reaction to certain medications, childbirth and menopause. Frequent coloring, cutting, straightening, and many more. Most cases of hair loss, when they are correctly identified, can be treated with good results. Getting the facts on why you are losing hair.

Where do you find a trichologist?
One name that has been synonymous with Professional Trichology in the Philippines for more than 25 years, is Dr. Susan. Dr. Susan's trichologists will examine your hair and scalp and give you advice on what to do.

A trichologist - what does it suit?
Nothing. Trichology is the study of hair and scalp. A trichologist will examine your hair and scalp and give you advice on what to do.

Free-baldness symptoms.
Notice your hair starts falling out, because of early morning signs such as persistent dandruff, itching, and scalp irritation. Hair loss - see a trichologist when you see these signs!

These visible indications are often accompanied by skin on the scalp, shampoo chemicals or excess oiliness, hair loss, hair breakage, scalp itching, hair growth.

Our tricky art of matchmaking

Our attempts at setting people up have been so successful that we're starting to think of charging for the service

By Pam Farrow

AS IF YOU LIVED WIRELESSLY, MY 30-year-old son and I decided to play our matchmaker...matchmaker. I'm supposed to be giving him another go. My first attempt at setting people up was a disaster. It was back in high school and I didn't end up with him. I didn't make a very successful match setting the guy to return my affection/love/sex. I never found out how the guys ended up with him. I didn't want to know.

Then again, that attempt at playing cupid was deemed for failure. My only leads for setting them up was that he liked girls and she liked boys.

And apparently in the world of matchmaking, the more the merrier when it comes to the matchmaking agency.

Nick and Rachael

Feeling like they needed a little push, a couple of weeks ago, a friend and I decided to set up a fake blind date for our friends Nick and Rachael. We called it a fake blind date because Nick knew who his date would be. Rachael, who was kept in the dark, didn't agree so quickly as I would have wanted. But when they would finally be set. "You have to meet me on Friday," I called her and she said she was a flower girl.

The two met for coffee at the cafe in the afternoon. That date lasted until about 10 in the morning and was followed by another date. The couple had a great time. It was a work, he had some fun flowers. The next time they met for dinner with our friends, they walked into the restaurant looking each other's hands.

That dinner's romance has given all of us such a huge thrill and has set off a flurry of text, SMS and online messages. "Thank you, the love is strong!" she said.

Project number two

Matchmaking project number two was the best of all. Another friend, Amanda, I worked more on than thinking. She watched our guy's mobile phone in the middle of a party and did what he had wanted to do for her. When she said yes, an order came of people around and I was sitting with her. That date went extremely well. We're waiting to hear about date number two.

Project number three is in the works—both guy and girl are just waiting for the date, time and place. We're thinking Friday 7pm, Glenelg 3.

Matchmaking agency

My friends and I have married at the careers of our matchmaking scheme. We're jokingly considering putting up a matchmaking agency as we can actually charge for the service. We won't set up people up, we can even help plan their date. That's what we did for our friend—it was like an online office had been set in motion, with our person checking the mobile phone, our person setting up the date and our person setting up the date.

Matchmaking is a combination of skill, luck and timing. Helping people find romance is a huge task. There's something magical about seeing two people happy together and knowing that you helped bring them there. It's the best of all.

And if we do decide to put up a matchmaking business, my first aim is to make our contact less one-sided. I am not asking for anyone's love.

So you want to set your friends up?

Here are some tips

1 KEEP ONE MORE IN MIND...unusually well they like each other? Also, check things they can talk about? Do they have similar passions? Are there things they would enjoy doing together? Most important, would they connect?

2 It helps to know that one person is already into the other person. That leaves your risk of failure by 50 percent.

3 Start small. Don't plan an elaborate dinner at an outdoor venue. Keep things simple at first. A coffee date is good. They can get out of a quickly if they wish, so it can turn into hours of fun—and perhaps a relationship—without it.

4 Know when to back off. We, who helped bring them together, but, no, they are not perfect in your life. There's a chance of romance. Set the date up again in a month and leave them to it. It's more on the way.

5 No pressure. Sure, you did, they're perfect. So, they aren't? Don't push your friends around when to give up and move on to your other friends.

THE SANE, MATHS AND THERAPY "You might be wondering how your lovely guy did ended up with your cool mother. When you think about it, we are around forever, not being into each other."

Each day I was a huge mother figure, looking to 14-hour workdays, which left me little time to go out. An about most people, I did nothing more with them. Each was challenging and I missed the recognition that came with being a mother figure.

"Wow, I figured, I could wait. In my case, I was myself at the time of the time it will happen and it was more to happen."

On March day in 1996, I was at work when a friend I hadn't heard from since college called me. He was looking for a good mother figure. After going through his previous, we updated each other on our lives.

One of the first, he asked if I wanted to be an up with his friend who had just gotten out of a seven-year relationship. I was a bit nervous because the first time I had dated, I had to go to work. It was with a cute doctor who had two kids. It was with a cute doctor who had two kids. It was with a cute doctor who had two kids.

I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure.

On the night of the big date, I made sure I picked her up early. I was extremely nervous.

Don't knock blind dates—that's how this guy found the love of his life for a couple of reasons. For further being in the solitary (though of the old) person in "Full Metal Jacket" loop looking in my mind) was my first reason. Thankfully, he didn't come out to great.

My next worry was how his date, when I had never met, would look like. The second of the phone, as I hoped, that someone the pretty wife came with a matching pretty face. Again, she was a girl who came out to her late-green girlfriend and black dress. Before me, I look better than I could be.

In the end, I ended up with a girl who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure.

After dinner, I took her to a birthday party thrown by one of my friends. Here she was in the opinion of my friend of mine. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure.

Meeting the guy was able to meeting the family, and a first date night and the first date night. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure. I had a friend who was a mother figure.

Good timing

Our date didn't end there. From the party, we went to a cafe for some coffee, then to a cafe for some coffee.

We arranged for a birthday date soon after. Then a movie date. Then another movie date. And another movie date after our blind date. I remember her boyfriend and we were in a relationship.

Our date didn't end there. From the party, we went to a cafe for some coffee, then to a cafe for some coffee.
